Was there a particular reason the way that the statements were organised? I know if I were to write the code, I would not have those separate declared statements outside of the main function, was that just a thing to save some time or is that something that should be implemented in my personal code to help clean it up and make it better organised?